Wagon Road Has Been Repaired

The wagon road between Blairmore and Coleman has just received some repairs and vehicles may now pass over it with some degree of safety. However there are still places along this highway which need looking after and we think that the government road men might devote a little more of their time in putting the highway between Coleman and Blairmore more in a somewhat respectable condition.

Each Side Secures Five Points in a Debate

The regular weekly meeting of the young people's Guild held in the Presbyterian church on Monday evening last, took the form of a debate, the subject being "Resolved that Canada own their own Navy rather than send an Annual Cash Subsidy to the Imperial Government."

F.M. Pinkney occupied the chair. Mrs. Page acted as organist. Amongst the items on the program which fitted in between the several spasms of the debate were a solo by Mr. Chester, recitation by Miss B. Pinkney and readings by Misses E. Davis and M. O'Brien.

The judges appointed were by the affirmative, F. M. Pinkney; by the negative, L. M. Putnam; a third by both the contending leaders in the debate, Miss M. O'Brien.

Rev. A. S. Tod, B.D., led in the affirmative and brought forth some very strong reasons why Canada should have a navy of her own. His arguments were convincing and many of them were not refuted by the opposition speaker. The leader of the affirmative was full of the subject and performed his part in a masterful way.

J. D. S. Barrett, leader of and only speaker for the negative, then followed. At the end of the 10 minutes he was informed that he was exceeding the time limit but he was given an extension of five minutes because "Sleepy" Dellis, who was to assist in the negative, "slept in," at Macleod, did not get up in time to catch the evening train and to be present at the meeting.

T. B. George was the next speaker and assisted in the affirmative. He likened Canada, without a navy for protection from hostile foes, unto a village without fire protection. His point was well put and carried weight.

After the "summing up" the judges got together and after going into the matter thoroughly, gave the following decision: Rev. A. S. Tod, four points; T. B. George, one point—total for the affirmative, five points. J. D. S. Barrett, who was the only speaker for the negative, received five points. The decision, however, was given to the affirmative because of Rev. A. S. Tod's oratorical presentation.

MINERS Attention

"Just as the Conservative party has succeeded in fighting its way into some degree of favor with the country, and reaching a point where victory may possibly be achieved, along comes Mr. George Taylor, former chief Conservative whip, with an ill-considered remark in the House of Commons that 'it would be better for the Government to drive the strikers to work at the point of the bayonet.'"

It is just blithering blather, like this blundering ass, who keep the Conservative party on the bum. This outrageous remark will be used with fatal effect by the Grits at the ensuing elections. The labor element on the pvod is no joke when seats have to be won."

Court Proceedings

The case of Matthew Green versus Peter Micani, for alleged violence in trying to prevent Green from attending his work, was heard at Blairmore police barracks on Tuesday before Justice Pinkney and Gresham. Micani was found guilty and fined $15 and $9.75 costs. Colin McLeod appeared for the prosecution and J. R. Palmer appeared for the defence.

The case of perjury instituted against Matthew Green by J. R. Palmer and which came up for hearing before Justice Disney, was adjourned awaiting instructions from the Attorney-General. Colin McLeod appeared for the defence. Peter Micani has applied for an appeal to the higher court.

Matthew Green has appealed his case against Louis Boldovino, which came up for hearing last week and which case was dismissed by local magistrates.

Blairmore School Has Been Enlarged

"School days, school days, their old golden era, Rosalyn, an excellent 'Fiddler,' Taught to the tune of the hick'ry stick."

The Blairmore school was reopened on Tuesday after several weeks of enjoyable holidays. The teachers now in command of the education of the boys and girls of this town are: Miss O'Brien, principal; Miss Davis, Mrs. Page and Miss Cogeland.

A large addition has just been made to the school and the teachers and scholars are delighted with the spacious rooms, the numerous conveniences and the general improvements. The addition, which is two stories, provides for two class rooms of about 25x35 feet each, convenient cloak rooms, comfortable libraries and a tall imposing tower, from the top of which comes the "ding-dong-dell" of that high-toned bell which regulates the hours of session, welcomes the children to school and gives them a happy parting note.

The school is heated throughout by steam and hot air and has running hot and cold water. The interior of the building has just been beautifully stained and varnished and the exterior has also been improved by several coats of well selected paint. At present the main building has but four rooms. If the attendance increases at the rate it promises to it will be a matter of only a few months before Blairmore will need larger school accommodations. We hope soon to see a high school established in the busy, bustling burg.

Improving the Cos- mopolitan Hotel

A. A. Sparks, who has just recently purchased the Cosmopolitan hotel from Harry Howard, is having some improvements effected on the interior of the building and is putting his hotel into a first-class condition. At present Mr. Sparks is having the office enlarged by removing the partition between the old barber shop and the main office. This will give considerable room and will mean a great improvement. Frayer & Sinclair are doing the work.

Stateroom No. 24

A Coincidence Leads to Serious Results

By F. A. MITCHEL

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

"All right, sir," said a steward of the liner Polytechnia, scheduled to sail in two hours. "This way, sir." And, seeing Mr. Jones had baggage, he led him to stateroom No. 24. Flinging the door open, there was a trunk and hand baggage, ladies' wraps and other articles, while on the wall was a bouquet of flowers.

"What's this?" growled Mr. Jones. "This is the main deck, isn't it?"

"Yes, sir."

"And No. 24?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, what's this baggage doing here?"

"I don't know, sir. I'll go to the purser's office and see."

While the steward was away Mr. Jones examined the baggage in the stateroom. Pulling the trunk around where he could see the name painted on the end, he was astonished. There was his own name with the prefix of a Mrs. before it—Mrs. E. R. Jones.

Mr. Jones had no wife, had no idea of taking a wife and wouldn't have a wife if she brought him a fortune. At the same time there was a peculiar feeling at seeing woman's paraphernalia in his stateroom—that is, all except the flowers, for on examining a card attached to them he saw that they had been sent by a man, and this brought a tinge of jealousy. A fur lined cloak lay on the berth, unbuttoned, and parcels were strapped together, and baskets, some of them marked with the letter J, were on the floor.

Then Mr. Jones got a scare. When a young man, while roistering with a lot of boys and girls, he had gone through a mock marriage ceremony. He had been betrothed, and the girl was meditating an attempt to prove the ceremony legal, and it had worried him. Suppose that she had

"An odd circumstance, isn't it, that two persons of the same name should be assigned the same room?"

"Very."

"And still more remarkable that one should be Mr. and the other Mrs.?"

"Quite so."

"It affords me great pleasure, I assure you, to give way to you."

"You are very kind, but I think it would be more just to discover to whom the room really belongs. Steward, can't you bring the purser here?"

"I think so, ma'am. The crowd isn't coming about three."

The steward went for the purser, and the lady, entering the room, the door of which was looked open, invited Mr. Jones to sit down, but he chose to remain standing. It occurred to him to ascertain whether the lady were wife or widow.

"I wonder," he said, "if your husband's initials stand for the same name as mine. I am Edward Richard Jones."

"My husband's name was Edwin Richard Jones."

"Ah, I see! There is a difference after all."

The lady looked at the name on the card attached to the flowers, smiled at them and, choosing a rose, took it out of the water pitcher and handed it to Mr. Jones. Mr. Jones bowed, smiled at her and understood to put the rose in his buttonhole. Falling in the attempt, Mrs. Jones inserted it with fingers, bringing her round white fingers in close proximity with his. He could scarcely refrain from kissing them.

The steward came back with the purser, who said a room had just been found for which Mr. Jones was to be taken.

Mr. Jones assented; then, bowing very low and backing respectfully out of the stateroom, he left the lady looking after him with a curious expression on her face. It was a blank look in one sense and one full of meaning in another. It was a great deal, but Mr. Jones could not interpret it.

There was one circumstance connected with the brief meeting that meant a great deal. That was the bestowal of the rose. It enabled Mr. Jones to address Mrs. Jones, when he met her again, on friendly terms. Without it he would have felt constrained to wait for her to speak to him. As it was the day after sailing, the weather being fine and the ocean smooth, Mrs. Jones being on her steamship chair, Mrs. Jones approached her, doffed his cap and entered into conversation. The sun was glittering on the water, merry young men and maidens were playing shuttlecock, the deck stewards were handing 11 o'clock bouillon—in short, Mr. Jones, who seemed to be one of those serene of face comfort that are afforded by an ocean liner when all is serene.

Though Mrs. Jones was still young, she was a widow and even before her marriage had had a natural insight into the management of men. It was her desire to make herself attractive to Mr. Jones, and how did she go about it? Did she charm him by the depth or brightness of her eyes? No, she did not. She talked to his heart's content, the drinking in every word he was saying. The only subject she seemed able to discuss was the singular coincidence of a Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Jones who were not married and had never seen each other before having been assigned to the same room.

He kept harping on this subject, thus leading him to dwell on it till he began to wish he was married. And one man begins to wish for the double state and his ideas of a partner in that state become fixed on any one woman it is merely a question of time with him, provided the woman consents.

They were taking the Mediterranean trip, and there were thirteen days during which Mr. Jones could get away from her without jumping overboard. He made no mention of the remark she had overheard. He had not attached any special importance to her having heard it and had already forgotten it himself. It did not occur to him that so small a thing was to be the turning point in his whole life.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones parted at Naples to meet again at Venice. Moonlight on the Grand canal was the scene, the lady to the sound of music from boats, a rubato, Italians screaming out of date songs. Love, moonlight and the entrancing scene made the songs seem delicious harmony. But Mrs. Jones didn't need romance to plunge him into matrimony. He had none one to drag him there. He awoke to a consciousness of having, after all, wanted a wife.

But the question that troubled Mr. Jones was, Did the widow with a second husband, and if so, did she wish to fill the position? All that Mr. Jones could get out of her was that she would take his proposal under consideration. She was going to Switzerland, where she would remain until a few days before sailing from Genoa.

If he could meet her in that city she would give him the answer he wanted. Mr. Jones spent the rest of his sojourn in Europe not in sightseeing, but in waiting. A week before the sailing of the vessel in which the widow was to return to America he appeared at Genoa and fretted and fumed till the widow appeared. Meanwhile she and concluded that she would let Mr. Jones make up his mind that if she met an opportunity she would make him eat his words.

"Is this No. 24?" she asked.

"Yes, ma'am," replied the steward.

"Has my baggage been put in?"

"Yes, ma'am, here, ma'am."

"Mrs. Jones' baggage?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"There's been a mistake, madam," said Mr. Jones, doffing his hat and showing a small bald spot on the top of his head—"A very curious mistake. My name is Jones too."

"Indeed!" said the lady in a tone which indicated that she fully understood the situation.

"And, singularly enough," continued the gentleman, "I have the same initials that are on your trunk. I am Edward R. Jones."

"Indeed!" the lady again said, not intending to convey any meaning.

IS BRIDGE DOOMED?

The Gambling Game Said to Be Losing Castle in England.

Not so long ago an inquest was held at a Birmingham woman who committed suicide after losing some money at a bridge. It was stated that she was, as a rule, a first rate player, but that on the evening of her death she played very badly and lost games which she should have won easily.

This tragedy is another example of the unsuitability of card games to the feminine temperament. Many women are admirable bridge players as far as mere skill and knowledge are concerned, but they are utterly ill-humored. They are too emotional and too easily upset by the outrageous tricks that fortune so often plays.

This tendency to reason why bridge has lost its popularity and is so rapidly falling out of fashion. When the game was at the height of its vogue for many years ago, it was mainly women who played it. "Mixed" card clubs, clubs where men and women could meet for bridge, sprang up all over London.

But the women could not stand the strain. The game got to their nerves, and the clubs from being pleasant social gatherings degenerated into nagging and brutalized institutions.

There were no suicides, but there were minor tragedies in abundance. Bristle-brush companies that they were returned from their bridge clubs in a state of nervous tension that made conversation impossible. The nagging that was merely a disguise for the card table became utterly intolerable when transferred to the home. In a number of cases the domestic peace was irretrievably shattered. The more usual ending was resignation from the club which caused all the mischief. The last couple of years have seen the closing of half the clubs of the principal mixed card clubs in London, and bridge as a social recreation is apparently doomed.—London M. A. B.

WORKLESS WATCHES.

Pocket Timepieces to Be Operated by Wireless Waves.

Gold and silver watches soon will be melted for the precious metal, according to the prophesies made at the wireless convention by Charles H. Hight, a Birmingham of South Bend, Ind.

A great system of control clocks, absorbing and connected by wireless electric waves with individual timepieces carried in men's vest pockets, will supersede the present watches, the opinion of Hight, who is superintendent of a watch company.

"We ourselves will see this change," he declared. "In a few years every man who wants to know the time will take a dial from his pocket, something like the watch which he carries now, but instead of looking at the dial and figuring out how slow or fast the watch is running he will simply press a button on the watch and a beam of electricity from a controlling clock, perhaps many miles away, will spin the needles around to the proper position. I shall show him the absolute correct time."—St. Louis Cur. New York Times.

Glasgow's Ancient Origin.

We are accustomed to think of Glasgow as a typically modern city; but, though its wealth and commercial pre-eminence are of recent date, the town itself can be traced back for close upon 2,000 years.

The earliest mention of the city is in the Celtic origin, and among the numerous conflicting deductions of its meaning are "the grey mist," "the green wood," "the beloved green spot." The see of Glasgow was founded about 560 by St. Mungo himself.

And the town was made a borough by David I. in 1175. It became a royal borough in 1336 and a self-governing city in the time of William and Mary. In ecclesiastical history Glasgow is famous for the assembly in 1638 which voted the renunciation of episcopacy.—London Chronicle.

Washington Is Expensive.

Congressman James M. Curley, who divides his time about equally between the house in Washington and the Boston city council, says he finds it cheaper to travel back and forth than to live in the national capital. He tells the Boston Globe: "I am allowed $100 for traveling expenses each session, and that amount is all good for six trips if you buy round trip tickets. But apart from that I find it cheaper to go back and forth than to stay in Washington. No one knows what living in Washington means unless he has the actual experience. Why, $5 to $10 a day is nothing."

The Buttonhole Flower.

"The buttonhole flower is no longer a man's fashion. Ever since the coat with a lapel has been a man's garment the touch of floral color has been considered an appropriate decoration."

More than many the decorated belt of earlier times. But now woman has declared that her coat may be similarly adorned. Says Die Mode and the buttonhole, unless for any purpose except to hold a rose or a carnation, is never forgotten in making a woman's coat. In England, and even the first step in this style, and the rest of the world gladly followed."

Baking Sweet Apples.

A new way to bake sweet apples. Put the apples in a stewing pan, add a few drops of lemon juice and a pinch of salt, then let them cook for 10 minutes. They are then ready to eat.

Good form

Good Form Don'ts.

Don't wear colored or fancy open-work stockings with your street shoes. Always choose plain stockings to match the shoes in color.

Don't pile your ruffling and dress shields in place. Bustle them inward and see how much more comfort they give you. It really doesn't take much longer to bustle than to pile.

Don't think that because collarless dresses and blouses are fashionable you can wear a low cut dress on the street. There is a vast difference between "collarless" and "low-necked."

Don't buy any cheap jewelry and imagine it looks like anything but just what it is—a cheap imitation of a good article. Cheap jewelry is in bad taste at any time except with elaborate evening dress.

Don't wear soiled and muddled frills and neckties. They are in bad taste with perfectly plain clothes without trimmings. If you cannot keep these daily accessories fresh and without muddles, don't wear them.

Don't forget to see that your blouse is properly fastened before leaving your mirror. The waist gaping open at the back not only looks unbecoming, but may cause you some embarrassment too.

Don't allow your skirt to slip from under your belt. In these days there are many devices for holding the blouse, skirts and belts in place that there is no girl who cannot find one to answer her purpose if she only tries.

Don't wear gloves that have lost their buttons and never wear shabby shoes or gloves if you can possibly avoid it. Keep the former nicely polished and the latter straight; keep the buttons on and the rims mended in the latter.

Receiving Guests.

How many women fall in the politeness when they give themselves up to informal ways of doing things that are really very formal.

This is carrying informality to the point of ignorance, for if there is any reason why a loose garment is worn in the house it should at least be attractive and partially fitted to the figure. Then, in the event of some slight indisposition, it is possible to invite a woman guest to go upstairs into a bedroom, where the dowry dress, which would not be so much out of place.

To receive a man friend in such attire would be a grave indiscretion, for the man would know at least the attire and as it is always suggestive of the absence of guests it is on such occasions vulgar in the extreme.

The easy house gown, then, must look as if it were worn over corsets to be within the pale of propriety. And if masculine eyes are to look upon it it must be attractive and fitted to the figure to boot. But only an old lady or a young matron who is compelled to dress in this manner should make a practice of receiving guests in such informal attire, for the dignity of the hostess is thereby lowered.

Sometimes this attitude is from fear of intrusion, again it is from fear of not saying the right thing, too often it is from procrastination.

Whatever the reason, it is a mistake. There are some few who dislike outdoor life and who are afraid of the majority are hurt if it is not given. They never quite feel the same toward the friend who they think was neglectful of their trouble.

The visiting card with a few words of sympathy is sufficient, save among close friends. A married woman incloses the card of her husband.

Never make a note of condolence stated. It should express you and not be an essay on grief. Also be careful not to make a note of condolence more than pages of rambling platitudes.

It is customary to send the note to the mourning family, but older people best, including the others in your expressions of sympathy.

Etiquette For Children.

In answering for a person's children should not say "Yes, ma'am," or "No, sir," but "Yes, mother," "No, father," "I hope so, ma'am," "Thank you, Aunt Helen." They should, in other words, always acknowledge the title or name of the person spoken to.

In every day life, the ignorance of what is expected of one; therefore the child must be treated with great consideration and encouraged to compare the older and older people and then be shown just what to do and say.

No school of etiquette offers so many opportunities to its members to learn the correct way of doing things as the family table. No corrections should, however, be made in such manner as to attract the attention of others, and if possible, make the corrections after the meal is over.

AN ERROR IN A BOOK.

It Caused a Man's Death and Worked a Lot of Other Trouble.

M. Tournier, cuisinier-maître, on Dec. 19 last, received a letter from "a condition of insolvency." It was a curious book both for returning home and for being in the end state, but it was not the letter that he sent to M. Tournier. "I am drunk, but to the chemist and get something to sober me." The good wife looked up her family medicine book and ordered this mixture: Water, 15 grams; pepper tincture, 15 grams; ammonia, 15 grams. M. Tournier drank the potion and was ordered instantly, but he died that day.

His widow brought an action against the author of her family medicine book. The letter was a new edition of an old work. The new edition prescribed fifteen drops of ammonia for a drink cure. In the reprinting, by an oversight, "grams" had been printed for "drops." The cabinetmaker's widow won her case. The author of the family medicine book was convicted of "not having read the proofs of the new edition with sufficient care," and sentenced to three months' imprisonment with the benefit of the good offenders' act and a fine of $20. The chemist was also sentenced to three months, with the same benefit and the same fine, for having supplied a medicine without a doctor's prescription.

Finally both were jointly ordered to pay the widow $20 damages down, an income of $90 during life and $60 a year to each of her children till they came of age. This has probably proved the most expensive misprint on record.—Paris Letter in London Telegraph.

A PEACE PREACHER.

Mrs. Elmer Black, Who Has Gone Abroad to Spread the New Gospel.

Mrs. Elmer Black is one of the persons who do not agree with ex-President Roosevelt in his opinion of the impossibility of settling international disputes by arbitration. Mrs. Black is an apostle of peace. She talks and writes peace. One of the most interesting addresses made at the recent peace conference in Baltimore was hers. Mrs. Black is vice president of the congress. She is also editor and publisher of a new Editorial Review, a magazine that advocates universal peace.

In regard to her peace views, Mrs. Black says:

"I would not have faith in arbitration treaties or even league courts if evolution had stopped with nationalism. It has not. It has passed from a devotion to the state to a blind devotion to one's country. But because I see everywhere this new habit of thinking in terms of nations, this growing sense of all humanity, this deepening sense of brotherhood and a kinship of soul stronger and more enduring than any national distinctions because of this I believe that the promise of world peace and the reign of law is both feasible and certain of fulfillment."

Mrs. Black is now abroad, where she is to address many public gatherings in favor of universal peace.

Happenings in and Around Blairmore

Mrs. Long, of Pincher Creek, is visiting with Mrs. H. Gebo.

Mr. Paul Gilmore is a star player. See him on Friday evening.

J. R. Palmer came up from Lethbridge on Tuesday to attend to legal duties.

Rev. A. S. Tod, B.D., spent Sunday at Crow's Nest and exchanged pulpits with Rev. J. Hamill.

Don't forget to see Mr. Paul Gilmore, at the Blairmore Opera House, on Friday evening.

Mrs. Walter Fisher left on Wednesday morning for the New England states where she will spend about three months visiting friends.

Rev. J. Hamill, of Crow's Nest, B.C., came to town on Saturday morning. On Sunday he conducted the regular services in the Presbyterian church. He returned home on Monday.

Rev. A. S. Tod, B.D., attended Presbytery which convened at Pincher Creek on Wednesday and Thursday and returned home on Saturday.

Mrs. H. Gebo will shortly reopen her millinery establishment near the post office where a large assortment of fall and winter hats will be kept in stock. See ad. elsewhere.

W. L. Shera left on Saturday for Macleod, whence he journeyed to Calgary where he will remain for about two weeks. He will then return to Blairmore if Cupid does not intervene.

Rev. T. M. Murray, of Coleman, will occupy the pulpit in the Presbyterian church here on Sunday evening next, while Rev. A. S. Tod will take charge of Mr. Murray's end of the "vineyard" on that evening.

The regular weekly meeting of the young people's Guild which will be held in the Presbyterian church on Monday evening next, will be conducted by the missionary committee, of which Mrs. J. F. Lank is convener.

A full grown cow was mercilessly hurled to death by the early C.P.R. passenger train on Tuesday morning. The animal was crossing the track at the east end of Blairmore when the "iron horse" hurried by claiming the "right of way" with the result that the "beef" was given a fatal bounce and finally crushed to death beneath the wheels of the "mighty mountain climber."

There are very few "House for Rent" signs to be seen in Blairmore. This is proof of growth and prosperity, but also an indication that more homes ought to be provided for the people who would move here if houses could be rented. A large number of men are now working at the mines here and business in general has received increased activity. A number of cozy and attractive cottages that can be rented at a reasonable figure is what we need.

H. G. Bigelow, of S. J. Watson's drug store, was married at Calgary, on Friday evening, September 1st, to Miss Alice G. Edmiston. Miss G. Edmiston was bridesmaid and Rev. A. S. Tod, of Blairmore, acted as best man. Mr. and Mrs. Bigelow have gone to the Pacific coast on their honeymoon and will shortly return to take up their residence in Blairmore.

Mr. Gilmore is at his Best

In a revival of the play that made him start—a critic writes: "The most fashionable and audience of the season witnessed Paul Gilmore in 'The Mummy and the Humming Bird,' at the Academy of Music last night."

"The play was well balanced and everybody enjoyed it. It dealt with the most sacred relations—marriage, and the greatest impelling force in life—love. As a play, 'The Mummy and the Humming Bird' is a lesson, a study in human nature, the difference in man's and woman's nature and should be invariably observed—ordained."

The story of a good woman, the wife of a wealthy Londoner, accustomed to every luxury, every pleasure; every want, every wish is gratified except one, the love and companionship of a husband. Her husband is energetic, industrious and in fact everything except a companion to his wife. She is a woman with a life that is human and her happiness depends on the devotion of her husband. He makes her life miserable and is blind so far as understanding human nature of a woman. Her attention is directed to a wealthy Italian who admires her and is just the contrast, so far as nature of man is concerned. He understands the feminine sex, is gifted with a fluent flow of words and an all round experienced ladies' man. He shows marked attention to another man's wife, a wife who finds companionship and love in one, other than her husband. She is led on and on until finally the temptation is too great and in a fit of madness she loses control of her respect for her husband, goes to the villain and yields to her admiration for the clever foreigner, whom she thinks is capable of giving her happiness. The husband flies in pursuit and traces her to the rooms of the villain but outwits him. In the last act, the climax is reached. She runs away, thinking she has brought degradation upon herself and family, but not so. He again pursues and finds her heart-broken in her room in Paris. An understanding is the conclusion. The villain has brought punishment upon himself and a bad beginning ends well.

As usually treated, a sprained ankle will disable a man for three or four weeks, but by applying Chamberlain's Liniment freely as soon as the injury is received, and observing the directions with each bottle, a cure can be effected in from two to four hours. For sale by all dealers.

For bowel complaints in children always give Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and castor oil. It is certain to effect a cure and when reduced with water and sweetened is pleasant to take. No physician can prescribe a better remedy. For sale by all dealers.

John Herron's Meetings - Gets Chilly Receptions

John Herron, the Conservative candidate for this riding, held public meetings in The Pass this week and simultaneous with Mr. Herron's visit to this part of the constituency we have been having cold rains, which too plainly foretells the reception which will be accorded him at the polls on September 21st.

A meeting was held at Coleman on Monday evening. It was with great difficulty that a chairman was secured. The speakers were H. E. Lyon, John Herron and J. M. Carter. The meeting was not well attended and it was plain that the Conservative force had become considerably weaker since the last elections. David Hyslop made a speech on behalf of the Socialists and told his hearers that inside of ten years Canada would have a Socialist government. The Conservatives became bewildered and looked at each other in astonishment at the remarkable utterances of the Socialist orator. Tears of disappointment rolled down the cheeks of many of the Conservatives and several left the building.

On Monday evening John Herron held a meeting at Frank. A. I. Blais took the chair. The speakers were H. E. Lyon, John Herron and J. S. Quigley. At 8.30 p.m., the speakers and J. M. Carter took their seats on the platform amidst grave silence. When the meeting commenced there were seventy-six persons, including the speakers and one lady, present.

Mr. Lyon was the first speaker. He spoke for about ten minutes. He said that Premier Bifton had told the people of this province that if the Liberal party is returned to power Alberta will receive its natural resources. If the Conservative party is elected we shall have good roads suitable to run automobiles over at a speed of 70 miles an hour, declared the speaker. "If you will give Mr. Borden an opportunity, he will do more for you than any Socialist government will be able to do," said the speaker.

John Herron was the next speaker. He said he had never had a newspaper to say any good word for him. Some people had said he never did any big thing for the good of his constituency, but the speaker informed the audience that he had done some small things. The elections have been brought on "very, very" suddenly, continued the Conservative candidate. Mr. Borden said that we have waited 45 years for reciprocity, and we should wait six months longer before putting that matter through. The speaker said that it costs only 54 cents per bushel on wheat to ship from Argentina to Canada, while it costs 16 cents per bushel to ship wheat from Alberta to Port Arthur over the C. P. R. Mr. Herron went on in this strain for some time during which several left the meeting. While a number of people were leaving some one remarked "They are going out." "Yes," said another person in reply, "and John Herron's light is going out."

J. S. Quigley, superintendent of the Hillcrest mines, gave a seven minute boost for the Conservatives. The meeting held at Blairmore was of the same character as the one held at Frank on the previous evening.

It's the united efforts of little things that make big troubles.

Happenings in and Around Bellevue

The preacher at the Methodist church next Sunday will be Rev. George Edwards, of Livingstone.

Bellevue scrub team visited Passburg on Wednesday last to play the Bellevue and district league. The result was a draw, 1-1.

On Sunday the Men's Bible Class had a debate on the teachings of "The Servant in the House." Those taking part were Messrs. Mackay, Christie, Bateman and Rev. W. H. Irwin.

Rev. W. H. Irwin has recently introduced a unique feature into church work at Bellevue, in teaching the foreign people through the medium of classes in the English language. These are much appreciated by the foreigners and the movement is attracting wide interest among the foreigners of Bellevue and surrounding towns. Separate classes for Italians, Slavs, and French each meet twice a week. Another interesting feature is a physical training class for children in which instruction is given along such lines as sanitation, ventilation of sleeping apartments also exercises in callisthenics, elocution and expression are taught.

Sunday School treat. The children's annual field day was held at Bellevue on Saturday last in connection with the Methodist church. All the children of the camp were entertained to tea and oranges and candies were given out free to all the children of the camp. There was enough and to spare of both food and candies and all the mothers and fathers of the children were given tea free. Sports were arranged for the Sunday school scholars and prizes were given out at the church at night by Rev. W. H. Irwin. We regret to state that during the football match one of the players, Edward Atkinson, got a severe blow in the abdomen by one of the opponents (which of course was accidental) and was taken home in a critical condition. He was one of the active workers of the sports for the day and his friends hope that he may have a speedy recovery. He is being attended by Dr. Mackenzie, of Bellevue.

We can't have a great city unless we have a strong and vigorous and intelligent citizenship. - Hon. J. L. Griffiths

Passburg Notes.

(Too late for last week.)

BORN - On Sunday last, to Mr. and Mrs. Rowley, a son.

W. Duncan has just moved into his new and imposing cement residence.

The R.N.W.M. police are stationed near the mine and protecting the working miners.

J. Eastman is preparing to start a boarding house in Mr. Hamilton's old residence at Police Flats.

Passburg mine is shipping several cars of coal each day. There are about fifty men working at the mine.

The large battery of coke ovens were completed last week and further developments are expected to take place in the near future.

The game of football played here last week between the local team and the Burns stars resulted in a victory for Passburg by a score of 4-1.

A C.P.R. station has just been built and work on a large platform has also just been completed and the "local" trains have now made Passburg a regular stopping place, thus supplying a long-felt need.
